Sometimes it even makes you wonder if you're living in the right century. Case in point: NASA's "Sols 1, 3, 4" team published a report Monday detailing how the passing year has been a very strange one. Really, it's a very weird year: We've seen lots of things that are out of the ordinary. Image: NASA/Goddard/Handout/Getty Images 6 Here Are the Most Insane Things We Saw This Year NASA's "Sol 1, 3, 4" team released a report that touches on a number of pretty strange things. In fact, their list of events that made 2016 pretty weird should be on the wall of every grade school as a matter of historical record. 1. An asteroid the size of a house was spotted. What you're looking at here is a very big asteroid. But it's not the size of a house, as you might assume. As NASA explains, though the object is over 700 feet (or 186 meters) across, it's actually about half a mile wide. That's very big for an asteroid, but it's also pretty small relative to the size of a house. Although it looks really big, it's more like the size of a small school bus. We've seen other big things, but never something that large. Image: NASA The asteroid broke up in December, but not before it came within about 1.6 million miles (2.4 million kilometers) of Earth. Image: NASA In case you're wondering, no, the asteroid didn't come ba244e880a
