-----Q: How to execute a bash script and get its return value I am trying to do something like this. echo 'file result' | perl sc.pl if (echo $?) >0) { echo "File was found!" } But I can't pass the return value of the perl script to the if statement. A: You can use expect to do such thing: $ expect -c 'expect -f sc.pl; echo "expected result" | expect -f sc.pl' expect was compiled with extensions USE_KSH and USE_HZ ^Z expect: sc.pl not found After that expect created a little python script: $ cat expect.py import sys print sys.stdout.read() $./expect.py expect was compiled 09e8f5149f

The icons in this pack are designed to complement the Amiga OS v3.1 interface. They are available in 9 different sizes and resolutions. Also included are eight standard toolbar icons. This is an icon pack for the European, Japanese and US keyboards, and will work with every dock application. No installer, just the package of icons in a.zip format. Only 20Mb. We try to publish icons on a regular basis, but if something we did has been missed, give us a call.
