You can play it with your friends via the onlineQ: How to check that another process is suspended? I try to check if another process is suspended using the following code: #include int main(){ pid_t pid; pid = getpid(); while(1){

`sleep(5); printf("%d ",pid); } return 0; }` I run this program and got this result: 3828
3828 3828 3828 Why? A: The program terminates when the thread running in it reaches the end of execution (which happens when the while loop ends). The main thread waits for 5 seconds and then prints the process ID of the thread. Once the main thread prints out the last time, the program is no longer running. There's nothing happening in the while loop that prevents this from happening. Unassuming and intimate, Amici is a hidden gem located in Koreatown next to Amoy Seafood and offering some of the best traditional Italian cuisine. This small restaurant is a great choice for the true Italian food lover. And for those in San Diego,
