one would expect from the theory, there is an elliptic solution that is stable at low values of  $v$ , whereas the focus solution dominates for large  $v$ . Again, an interesting phenomenon is observed for larger values of  $v$ , as the elliptic solution turns into a limit cycle. As it can be seen, in the region where both fixed points exist, there exist stable and unstable periodic orbits.

===== In this paper, we derived an analytical description for the behavior of an autocatalytic reaction involving a time delayed feedback loop. A delayed feedback loop consists of a first-order differential equation, that is integrated in the phase plane. The differential equation describes the reaction kinetics, whereas the integration produces the time delay of the overall dynamical system. Our stability analysis of the three equilibria points of the dynamical system show that a delay creates the scenario for an initial value problem with a cyclic steady state which is located at the origin of the phase plane. Our stability analysis also shows that an increase of the delay time  $T$  can lead to chaotic dynamics, which can be observed in the limit cycle solutions for sufficiently large  $T$ . We used the theory of delayed feedback systems to derive an analytical estimate for the maximal delay time  $T$  for which the stable limit cycle
