Covadis is a dual approach products and services that aims to address various unmet and growing needs in the local and global markets for the environmental, health, safety, security and environmental protection sectors. The product lines include COVID-19 respiratory protection, air purification and air purification systems, filtration cartridges, water filtration cartridges, HEPA (high-efficiency particulate air) filters, HVAC (heating, ventilation, air conditioning) supplies and materials, and other product lines in the health care and environmental markets. The company also offers cleanroom and cleanroom manufacturing services, including the design, development, qualification, supply and integration of custom cleanrooms and cleanroom equipment. Covadis is located in Massachusetts, with manufacturing and research and development facilities in the United States and Europe. History Covadis was founded by John Waterhouse in 1992 and named for the Latin phrase for "converging air". Covadis has had two name changes over the past two decades. The company was first known as Covadis Environmental Systems, Inc. when it was founded in 1992. The company changed its name to Covadis Technologies, Inc. in 1999. It was then known for only a year as Covadis Technologies, before changing its name again to Covadis Technologies Inc. John Waterhouse was Covadis' first chief executive officer, and was with the company for more than 25 years.
