A: Updated Answer This is the result of running your code on my machine: Using your machine-specific output we can see that it is a proper Base64 encoded URL: Ensure that you include the full URL in the question as I did above (or in your question text) for all other machines that may have their default character set set to Latin-1 or ASCII. The linked website decodes the URL for you, which is why you don't see the Unicode char. Thanks to @Kaj for his comment. Original Answer Your URL is formatted like this: URL = " URL = " Your server is returning a JSON with a key:value pair for each request: In the first case, you see only the 'crypto' key:value pair. The 'crypto' is a web-friendly name that allows your client to differentiate this response from others. When you decode the URL you can see what the value is for the key. In the second case
