Robinson, 514 F.2d 205 (5 Cir.1975), the court held that a defendant's inculpatory statements adduced at a hearing on a Rule 11 motion are admissible in evidence at his trial on the merits as admissions by a party-opponent. The motion for judgment of acquittal or in the alternative for a new trial is also without merit. We find the defendant was properly identified and the evidence presented was sufficient to support the convictions. Accordingly, the defendant's conviction and sentence are affirmed. AFFIRMED. Q: Flex 3? or HTML5 Canvas My application is a mobile based one which requires lot of camera based functionality. I think Flex 3 is not gonna do the work right away. Just want to know. What are the best practices of creating mobile based applications which are having lot of camera based or graphics based functionality. I personally would go with HTML5 Canvas as there is lot of frameworks available for same. I am sure HTML5 Canvas will give me good performance. Why HTML5? Canvas can render 2d graphics very fast HTML5 Canvas supports DHTML graphics Your input will be highly appreciated. A: HTML5 Canvas is HTML markup, used for everything web graphics where Flex is lacking. If your rendering is limited to simple marks and lines, it will provide much the same performance as Flex. A canvas is a painted image that is not subject to the limitations of Flash. For the game/interactive applications are would require tile-based rendering, where there is little memory overhead (for tiles). For a camera app, you'll want to use a 3D engine like WebGL or O3D. I have always found Flash's native and Flex for mobile graphics to be a complete non-

Molecular mechanisms of the antitumor effect of pyrazoloacridine on cell culture and tumors in vivo. The antitumor activity of 10 novel derivatives of pyrazoloacridine in the PDT-resistant mouse lymphoma model of T-cell lymphoma, EL4, was studied. It was found that these compounds reduced growth of solid tumors, but not growth of liquid EL4 cultures. No correlation was found between the antitumor effects of the tested compounds on EL4 solid tumors in vivo, and their effects on growth of EL4 cell cultures. However, compounds showing a pronounced inhibitory effect on tumor growth in vivo were identified, for instance, thioflavine-like derivatives (2 and 4) and quinazoline-like derivatives (5 and 6). Further investigation of the effect of 2 and 6 on apoptosis demonstrated that 2, at a concentration of 30 microM, induced a moderate but significant increase in the percentage of EL4 apoptotic cells. Further, a concentration of 30 microM of 2 caused a moderate and dose-dependent inhibition of the ERK1/2 cascade phosphorylation; while 6 (30 microM) did not cause any inhibition. However, a combination of 2 and 6 showed a much more potent effect on apoptosis induction and ERK1/2 cascade inhibition. Thus, the combined effect of 2 and 6 on EL4 apoptosis induction was comparable to that of doxorubicin (1 microM), which at 30 nM inhibited EL4 apoptosis by 50%. However, the combined effect of 2 and 6 on EL4 viability was less potent than that of doxorubicin (30 nM) and slightly more potent than that of chloroquine (1 microM), which at 30 microM had no effect on EL4 apoptosis but caused 40% inhibition of EL4 viability. Systematic expansion of a single-valence-electron model based on generalized coherent states. A systematic expansion of the single-valence-electron model as proposed by Jain and Mukhopadhyay [J. Chem. Phys. 122, 041104 (2005)] is performed on the basis of the generalized coherent states technique in which the Laguerre polynomials of degree $1 \leq n \leq 5$ are used to construct the many-body basis functions. The total wavefunction is expressed as a linear combination of the basis functions, which leads to a simplified set d0c515b9f4
