Your first Photoshop tutorial, "how to achieve great photos," with details on Photoshop's key features and how to edit an image. Photoshop is the industry standard imaging tool for editing photographs and graphics, but it has many different uses and types of users. You can use it to create an artistic image, or to fix a picture you've taken or clip art you've created, or to make a picture realistic and color accurate. Photoshop's editing tools include the Brush Tool, a combination of a Brush and Pencil. You can use the Brush Tool to paint pixels or strokes to create new images in the layers (frames) of the image window. The Brush offers more control over when you paint and where you paint than the Pencil Tool does. You can save a Brush as a preset for future use. The Brush's tool settings include size, opacity, hardness, angle, blur, and pattern. You can use the Brush to paint pixels, strokes, shapes, or predefined brush patterns to create new images in the layers of the image window. You can use the Brush to paint to create new layers and to paint pixels, strokes, shapes, or predefined brush patterns to create new images in the layers of the image window. Paintbrush Tool The Brush tool comes with an array of different brush types. You can adjust the Brush Tool's settings to change its appearance. You can adjust the Brush Tool's settings to change its appearance. The Toolbar is one of the most frequently used tools in Photoshop. You can access it by moving the Toolbar to the side of the screen.

Phoenix shifts into the fall season, many of the streets and sidewalks are being repaved. Streetsblog Phoenix reports: "Last week, crews began paving and repaving parts of Roosevelt, McDowell, Central, Washington, Central Place and Central Ave." The Cannery District is getting a facelift too: "In August, St. Elias received two million dollars in Target Regional Voucher funds, which were then matched by $735,000 in federal funds, to renovate and rehab a total of 123,164 sq. ft. of commercial and residential space in the district's 11 buildings."

Gemini Luxury Lifestyle Residences is accepting applications for three new apartments, which include pre-construction pricing, in the Southgate shopping center. In other real estate news: T. Scott Lewis, CEO of Hagerty Insurance in Phoenix, sold his house to his wife for $3.6 million. The Community Credit Union plans to move from its current building on the corner of 2nd and Jackson and into the building at 4400 N. Central Ave. Housing fair for Central and East Phoenix was held Oct. 16 at the Phoenix Jewish Community Center. The University of Arizona's brand new facility in downtown Phoenix will be known as the Westward Light Building, which will be used to house UA administration and alumni relations. The facility is expected to open in 2018. A plan to build a new senior center near the Westgate neighborhood has been approved. You can read more about the political climate in Phoenix in this month's issue of Capitol Confidential, which features stories on the Phoenix City Council and the presidential election. And finally, two local companies are offering free seminars this month about how to prepare for housing and real estate crises. Transient hepatic failure secondary to beta-lactam antibiotics. beta-lactam antibiotics appear to cause a syndrome similar to classical drug-induced liver failure. This uncommon disease entity has a rapidly progressive and fatal course. A patient with beta-lactam antibiotic-associated liver failure and hepatic encephalopathy was treated with high-dose steroid therapy. Her condition improved but she subsequently developed bile duct obstruction and died shortly after a second transjugular intrahepatic portosystemic shunt procedure. To our knowledge, this is the first reported case of beta-lactam antibiotics-associated liver failure treated successfully with steroid therapy.

Unicode standardization for Chinese The Unicode Consortium is tasked with developing a standard for writing characters in the Unicode character set. The Unicode standardization process has historically been proceeding slowly due to the complicated process of standardization. The current standard, Unicode 9.0, has been released on April 23, 2016. Chinese is included in this new standard as a supplementary character set. This standard, as well as newly added characters, is documented in Unicode 9.0.1 (Chinese Supplement).

Overview The world's second largest written language, Chinese is currently encoded in several different standards, including GB 18030, GB2312, GB18030-2000, GBK, and Big5. The Chinese encoded in GB2312 is used for phonetic transcription. The GB18030 encoding was designed by the Unicode Consortium to provide simplified

Chinese characters as well as traditional Chinese characters (hanzi). However, the GB18030 encoding is not to be used as a replacement of the GB18030-2000 standard. A portion of Unicode Standard version 7.0 was already using the GB18030 encoding for simple Chinese characters. Since Unicode 9.0, the standard for the entire Unicode character set is fully using the GB18030 encoding and some other new inventions. Chinese characters consist of a core set and a list of characters used for code control. Core set Code points in the range U+4e00-U+9fa5 are obsolete for the core set. GB 2312-80, which includes the core set, is an encoding of Chinese for use in text systems. Extensions Code points U+4E00-U+9FA5 are allocated to the supplementary character set. The supplementary character set are covered in Unicode 9.0.1 and listed

On the heels of a deeply anticipated bill, the Senate Finance Committee marked up the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act (PRWORA) after House passage yesterday, May 9. Under this measure, an individual who has been convicted of a felony and cannot vote for life will be barred from food-stamp benefits for six years. If you are a food-stamp or other assistance recipient, this will affect you. Fortunately, the committee's addition of a sunset clause allows the legislation to be reconsidered during the next Congressional session. At a press conference today at MOVE! Southwest Virginia to discuss this and other critical legislative issues, MOVE! contacted its allies in the State and national Food & Water Watch organizations to call on state and federal representatives to once again press the House and Senate to drop this provision. One of those allies was Bob Fuchs, of the Piedmont Community Food Bank, a leader in the Food & Water Watch network of groups that deliver food to low-income people. “There is no need for this clause in the legislation,” Fuchs said. “It is bad public policy and the impact of it will be deeply felt by the poor and working families of Virginia. The legislation that was passed in the House of Representatives was a far better approach.” Most food stamps are distributed through the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), which is administered at the state level. The PRWORA provision would prevent some aid recipients from being able to vote for six years after they’ve been convicted of a felony. “PRWORA has been used by conservatives to deal with the problem of a felony record with SNAP,” said Mary Kay O’Hara, vice president for advocacy and policy for Food & Water Watch. “The legislation was written narrowly in the name of being punitive. It was in the form of a rider, bypassing the Senate’s review and approval. So there has been no Senate debate, no Senate amendments or changes in the provision. So its restrictions are very narrow and its impact on food assistance is also very narrow.” O’Hara also noted that the original PRWORA did not include a provision that would exclude those convicted of a felony from receiving federal child support collection. Now the committee and the House have agreed to include that provision, but with an added requirement that the individual must be a parent. ❖
