I could look for a free app for this (Text Assistant or something?), but am I wasting my time? Is there a better way? A: From what I know, Gmail does not have the feature you want. That's why I suggested writing an Apple script that would, for example, when sent a short-link URL to a Gmail user, starts an email with the title and body you want it to. The script would be something like this: tell application "Gmail" activate set subject to "Short URL" set body to "Just click the link to start this email" set reply to "myemail@example.com" end tell And then send to a user or send to all users in the contacts. Here you can find more details. You could also create a small app that would work exactly the same. That would be very similar to Apple Script. Here you can find more details. I think this is the best option. High-level expression and refolding of a functional fusion protein consisting of inner membrane protein A from Escherichia coli and D-amino acid oxidase from Lactobacillus brevis. The inner membrane protein A (IMP-A) from Escherichia coli is a homologue of the D-amino acid oxidase (DAO) from Lactobacillus brevis. In order to use the potential homologous ligase of the oxidoreductase domain of DAO in vivo, a fusion protein consisting of the N-terminal hydrophilic domain of IMP-A and the C-terminal hydrophilic and transmembrane domain of DAO was overexpressed in E. coli and then refolded. IMP-A and the fusion protein of IMP-A and DAO (Imad-DAO) were expressed at high levels in the form of inclusion bodies. The expressed fusion protein was formed by the linkage of IMP-A and DAO through a protease-resistant (Arg-Glu) linker without any cleavage at the junction site. After being dissolved in the urea-denatured

.ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A man who stayed behind to oversee a building's construction died when a falling wall struck him Sunday at a downtown St. Petersburg construction site, killing him, the authorities said. The officer spotted the man as he stood atop a scaffold with a ladder. He said the man was walking with the ladder when it fell, striking the officer.

Bystanders said the man was a construction worker. He fell about 10 feet (3 meters) to a concrete platform, police said. Tampa police told residents in a circular sent to social media accounts that the man was a licensed contractor and that his death was being investigated as a workplace accident. The Tampa Bay Times reports the National Association of Builders trade group's website says the man was a construction supervisor at Century 21 on Baymeadows in St. Petersburg. ___
